

MISSISSIPPI STATE UNIVERSITY™

Department of Communication

Clay Williams Fact Sheet

A graduate of the department, Clay received a BA in Public Relations before going to Harvard University to earn his Masters in Education Policy and Administration.

Currently, Clay is the executive director of Gulfport-Biloxi

International Airport.

Clay has been recognized as one of South Mississippi's Top 10 Business Leaders Under 40. Additionally, he is involved in numerous organizations, including the Gulf Coast Business Council, Gulfport Chamber of Commerce, Mississippi Airports Association and St. John's Episcopal Church.

Clay's advice to students comprises completing an internship while in college and getting involved in campus activities as well as activities sponsored by civic or church groups. Also, Clay suggests students in the department take business and government courses as their electives when possible.

Clay is the husband of Alexis Williams; together they have two sons, Warren and Everitt.